Brownfields Property Reuse Act

Annual Report to the General Assembly

October 2012

Executive Summary

This report to the General Assembly is required by the Brownfields Property Reuse Act (BPRA) of 1997 (G.S. 130-310.30 et seq.) and describes the activities and status of the N.C. Brownfields Program (Brownfields Program) from Oct. 1, 2011, through Sept. 30, 2012 [Federal Fiscal 2012]. The N.C. Division of Waste Management (DWM) is pleased to report continued success in the state's efforts to revitalize and safely reuse brownfields properties through the Brownfields Program and its partnership with the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA).

Program Output

At the conclusion of last year's reporting period (Sept. 30, 2011), the Brownfields Program had produced a cumulative total of 202 brownfield agreements since program inception. (This is a correction from last year's report, which had projected two additional agreements that had not been finished prior to Sept. 30.)

For the reporting period Oct. 1, 2011- Sept. 30, 2012, the tracked measures include:

- Program applications received: 52
- Brownfields agreements finalized: 27
- Acres of Brownfields finalized: 433
- Estimated committed capital investment for projects entering program: $167 million

All of the public dollars spent by the program are either federal funds from a cooperative agreement with the EPA or from program fee receipts (DENR receives no state-appropriated funds for the program). With these funds, the program is facilitating or has facilitated $7.7 billion in estimated private investment in brownfields redevelopment-projects.

Outreach to Local Governments

Working in partnership with local governments and regional councils of government (COG) towards redevelopment projects has led to continued success for those local governments applying for and winning competitive brownfields grants offered by the EPA for the assessment and cleanup of brownfields properties. North Carolina has significant brownfields redevelopment needs, and a system is in place whereby an active community of local governments is working in partnership with the state to effectively address brownfields redevelopment. Six North Carolina local governments (more than any other state in EPA Region 4) were awarded a total of $1.6 million in U.S. EPA brownfields grants in 2012, including Cooleemee, Durham, Greenville, Havelock, Hickory and Wilson.

After the U.S. EPA awards these grants, the N.C. Brownfields Program works with these local government grantees to educate their local brownfields stakeholders such as lenders, real estate professionals, businesses and developers about the usefulness of a brownfields agreement in defining their environmental liability and facilitating their redevelopment. While such a grant is not necessary to gain a brownfields agreement under the Brownfields Program, it does provide a source of funding for assessment and/or cleanup for the local stakeholders, which can help jump-start projects that are within the awardee's jurisdiction.

Program Background

Redevelopment of brownfields properties has become increasingly popular as developers and local governments realize that these properties offer viable opportunities to bring economic growth, public health protection, jobs and quality-of-life benefits to cities and rural areas. Brownfields are abandoned, idled or underused properties where environmental contamination hinders redevelopment due to concerns about environmental liability. The BPRAs give DENR the authority to enter into brownfields agreements with prospective developers who did not cause or contribute to site contamination. The BPRAs modify the environmental liability barrier for prospective developers and motivate them to bring these properties and their hindrances to DENR's attention. DENR partners with the prospective developer to evaluate the possible risks associated with site contamination, and then negotiates a brownfields agreement stipulating the steps necessary to make the site safe for a specific intended reuse. The result is a redevelopment project that fuels economic growth while protecting public health and the environment.

Since brownfields agreements afford prospective developers liability protection for as long as they make and maintain the site safely for its intended reuse, the specter of open-ended financial uncertainty is lifted. This economic shield allows prospective developers to obtain financing previously unavailable for these properties.

Thus, the BPRAs allow DENR to distinguish between prospective developers of brownfields properties and the properties' polluters. Instead of mandating that the site be cleaned to current standards, the BPRAs require developers who did not cause or contribute to the contamination to make the site safe for reuse. The Brownfields Program must examine the risks to public health and the environment posed by the site and determine what the prospective developer must do to ensure safe redevelopment. These actions can range from land-use restrictions to cleanup, or a mixture of both. In addition to holding prospective developers accountable to their agreements, DENR reserves the right to enforce against those parties responsible for the original contamination.

The ancillary brownfields property tax incentive for prospective developers allows them to recoup funds spent on assessment and cleanup. The Brownfields Program motivates the market to recycle these sites to productive reuse, while preserving or reducing the use of pristine or undeveloped "greenfields" property. While the environmental benefits are obvious, most redevelopments also create a significant number of jobs and put properties back on the tax rolls. This dual economic-environmental gain benefits the state, local government and the brownfields developer. In the years since the BPRAs were enacted, and as these benefits have become better known, the Brownfields Program's popularity and demand for its services have increased dramatically.

The overall result is a winning scenario for the environment and economic development. Risk reductions and cleanups are achieved at sites that could have harmed the public or the environment, and prospective developers redevelop abandoned properties that once had little hope for productive reuse. The public benefits of job creation, improved quality of life in the surrounding neighborhoods, local tax base expansion and contribution to the general fund are other positive impacts. By the end of federal fiscal year 2012 (FFY 2012), an estimated $7.7 billion in capital investment will have been committed to redevelop abandoned properties that afflict urban and rural landscapes.

The Brownfields Program also supports smart growth, sustainability and land conservation. The 229 properties that have received completed agreements are estimated to represent 3,844 acres. This is, in effect, acreage that is being reused, sparing more pristine lands from development and from risk of future contamination.

In Figure 1, a summary of the steps involved in bringing a prospective developer from application submission to brownfields agreement is presented.

- Step 1 – A prospective developer (PD) submits a Brownfields Property Application to DENR outlining a brownfields site it desires to buy or sell for the purposes of redevelopment, and for which it needs liability protection. DENR determines if the PD, the subject property and the proposed redevelopment project are eligible under the BPRA statute. The PD pays initial $2,000 fee at the time a project is deemed eligible by DENR.
- Step 2 - DENR reviews existing site data to determine the risk posed by contamination at the site. If the data are insufficient to evaluate such risk, DENR advises the PD on further site assessment to gather the necessary data.
- Step 3 - DENR determines necessary actions to make the site suitable for the PD's intended reuse and includes these actions in a draft brownfields agreement. The PD and DENR negotiate the provisions of the draft brownfields agreement and other required statutory documents.
- Step 4 - The brownfields agreement is publicly noticed with a 30-day public comment period.
- Step 5 - The brownfields agreement is finalized after any public comments are considered and incorporated. Prior to the execution of the finalized brownfields agreement, the PD pays the secondary $6,000 fee. The PD uses the final brownfields agreement, which provides liability protection, to obtain financing for the project. Liability protection is contingent upon the completion of the actions required by the brownfields agreement. The brownfields agreement makes the site eligible for the brownfields property tax incentive.

Program Status

During FFY 2012, the Brownfields Program received 52 applications for projects seeking entry into the program. This compares favorably to the 46 applications received in FFY 2011 and continues a general increasing trend from the recessionary depths of 2008 and 2009. During FFY 2012, the Brownfields Program completed 27 brownfields agreements. Figure 2 below shows Brownfields Program trends over the last several years.

The Brownfields Program is preparing to receive its eighth year of funding from the EPA under its State Response Program Cooperative Agreement, authorized under the federal brownfields act. The federal grant program funds a core of three project managers in Raleigh and three regionally located project managers: one each in Asheville, Charlotte and Wilmington. In recent years, the U.S. EPA has decreased funding for states, including North Carolina. The Brownfields Program has been able to respond to these federal funding cuts by increasing fee funding in order to maintain capacity at 11 full-time equivalent positions. Fee funding now provides three project managers in Raleigh, a compliance coordinator located in Wilmington, and a portion of an N.C. Department of Justice attorney. The federal funding provides for 4.5 project managers and various program management and administrative functions. An environmental toxicologist position became vacant due to a retirement in April of this year. DWM plans to fill that position next year, converting it to funding through fee receipts rather than federal monies.

Outreach and Education

The Brownfields Program is largely market-driven, in that prospective developers bring their redevelopment projects to the program in order to break liability barriers for financing. One of the goals of the Brownfields Program is to educate the development community, lenders and local governments regarding the program's existence and usefulness as a tool for private and public redevelopment stakeholders. Efforts to increase awareness of the Brownfields Program continue to bring new redevelopment opportunities and their attendant public benefits into the program.

Local interest in brownfields is developing statewide, and local governments in this state continue to have great success in competing for EPA brownfields grant funds to local governments. The EPA awarded approximately $70 million in competitive brownfields grants to local governments in FFY 2011-12. Table 1 shows the brownfields grants awarded to local governments in North Carolina since program inception. The brownfields grant program has truly had statewide reach, as 37 local government entities have been awarded 62 separate grants. These grants range in value from $200,000 for assessment, cleanup and job training grants to $1 million for revolving loan fund grants. Funds awarded can be used for various aspects of brownfields redevelopment depending on the type of grant awarded.

Grantees in 2012 were Cooleemee, Durham, Havelock, Hickory and Wilson. The Brownfields Program met with these local governments in concert with the U.S. EPA at the Regional Grantee Meeting in Atlanta, held Sept. 26-27, 2012. The local brownfields activities to develop from these grants will serve to strengthen overall interest in brownfields redevelopment statewide and spark interest from developers seeking brownfields agreements from DENR as these communities begin their local brownfields redevelopment efforts. Moreover, these grant funds dovetail with DENR's efforts to support brownfields redevelopment, because the EPA continues to strongly recommend to these grantees that they seek entry into DENR's Brownfields Program to best use their grant funds. In this way, DENR's efforts are coordinated with those of EPA at the federal level and with government redevelopment teams at the local level.

Site Summaries and Inventory

Brief descriptions and status of all brownfields projects in the program as of Sept. 30, 2012, are found in the Appendix. It contains information on projects completed this year, projects completed since Brownfields Program inception, and projects that are actively being worked on towards a brownfields agreement. Some helpful definitions in referring to the tables include:

Finalized brownfields agreements are those projects that have a signed and recorded brownfields agreement (or have completed the public notice phase of the brownfields process and are waiting for the completed agreement to be signed). As of Sept. 30, 2012, the Brownfields Program has finalized a cumulative total of 229 brownfields agreements across the state, 27 of which were completed in the last year, Oct. 1, 2011, to Sept. 30, 2012.

Active eligible projects have been deemed eligible for a brownfields agreement under BPPA statutory criteria. These are projects in-progress, working with the Brownfields Program in some stage of data gathering, analysis or agreement negotiation. As of Sept. 30, 2012, 132 projects were active. Projects at this stage receive guidance from the Brownfields Program as the developers gather the additional data needed to ensure protection of public health and the environment. Once research is complete, the Brownfields Program analyzes the data, drafts and negotiates the terms of the brownfields agreement with the prospective developer, and approves initiation of the statutory 30-day public comment period.

Projects pending eligibility are in the initial stage of the brownfields process as they apply for entry into the Brownfields Program. Sites in this category have yet to meet the requirements under the statute for eligibility for a brownfields agreement. For sites in this category, the Brownfields Program has requested clarification or additional information from prospective developers regarding a site. Normally, developers respond to these requests for clarification, the sites are deemed eligible, and the sites quickly move into the active eligible category. As of Sept. 30, 2012, 18 sites were in this category.

Improving Effectiveness

Leveraging Resources into Private Sector Investment

Throughout its existence, the Brownfields Program has provided a high economic development value for the federal funds it uses. The program's 229 brownfields agreements and other projects in the pipeline represent in excess of $7.7 billion in estimated private redevelopment investment. During that period, the Brownfields Program has used no appropriated state funds. The high ratio to which the federal funds have been successfully leveraged into private development dollars for brownfields redevelopment is just one measure of the effectiveness of the BPPA. The economic activity and increased tax base generated by construction of these brownfields projects exceeds the public funds expended by many orders of magnitude.

Responding to Further Federal Funding Cuts

Over the last several years, the U.S. EPA has consistently cut grant funding to states across the nation for brownfields redevelopment programs. In North Carolina, federal funding for the 128(a) State Response Program Grant has been declining over the last five years. Table 2 below shows the history of the U.S. EPA grant funding to the Brownfields Program. Portions of the total grant goes to both the Brownfields Program and the Inactive Hazardous Sites Program:

Table 2. Funding from U.S .EPA State Response Program Grant

Award Year	Award Amount (to N.C. Brownfields & Inactive Hazardous Sites Program)	Award Amount Available to the N.C. Brownfields Program	% Cut
2008	$1,248,630	~$1,110,000	--
2009	$1,143,494	~$1,005,000	9.5
2010	$916,169	~$780,000	22.3
2011	$820,790	~$705,000	9.6
2012	$783,066	~$660,000	5.7

Over this five-year period, the North Carolina Brownfields Program has experienced a more than 40 percent decline in federal funding. The U.S. EPA continues to indicate to states that potentially deeper cuts are expected next year.

In order to maintain Brownfields Program capacity despite these funding cuts, and also to meet the statutory requirements of recovering all state costs from the prospective developers, the program increased its fees. In 2007 the Brownfields Program instituted an across-the-board fee increase from $2,000 to $5,500, reflecting the true cost of project managers that were federally subsidized through the program's EPA grant. In 2009, the Brownfields Program piloted the Redevelopment Now program option by which a developer can pay a higher fee and have access to a nearly dedicated project manager and immediate attorney services, bypassing any site queue and reducing the time to completion of a brownfields agreement. These particular project managers are without federal subsidy, and therefore the fee was set significantly higher ($30,000 as opposed to the normal $5,500 fee). This program option has been a success and the Redevelopment Now pilot has become a program option available to all. It has been a popular choice by developers of high-value projects where the cost of carrying financing for the normal queue process far exceeds the fee for such a separate project manager. Five agreements were finalized under this program this year, and others are nearing completion. In this way the program has quickened the pace on many such Redevelopment Now projects, reducing the time in the process from the typical 18 months to as little as five or six months. As of May 31, 2012, the program instituted its second across-the-board fee increase from $5,500 to $8,000 per site where no DOJ attorney is needed for further negotiation, or an estimated $12,000 per site where services of a DOJ attorney is necessary. As the Brownfields Program's funding has shifted from federal grants to fee receipts, so have the staff FTEs. Today the Brownfields Program stands at 7.5 federally funded FTEs and four fee-funded FTEs.

Reducing DOJ Attorney Costs

By taking advantage of the enormous knowledge base built through the completion of 229 brownfields agreements, the program has streamlined the process and reduced its legal costs.

The Brownfields Program firmly believes that its storehouse of various land use restrictions employed in agreements for more than a decade make it possible to greatly reduce the need for DOJ attorney involvement in 2012-13 from 1 FTE to 0.35 FTE, while at the same time streamlining the processing of brownfields agreements through reduced negotiation.

Measuring Productivity

The Brownfields Program is using a new metric this year: measuring the program's productivity normalized to the number of technical/legal staff that are producing agreements. The result shown in Figure 3 shows a slowly increasing productivity rate over this period. The 2012 productivity rate was the same as in 2011, even after the mid-year retirement of an experienced staff member.

Another measure the Brownfields Program tracks is committed private investment facilitated by brownfields agreements. Generally, these investments would not have been made in brownfields redevelopment areas and often not made at all without the liability relief afforded by a brownfields agreement. The cumulative total private investment facilitated by the program from its inception now stands at more than $7.7 billion, with approximately $167 million from projects entering the program this year.

Fund Status

The Brownfields Program receives no state appropriation and exists on two funding sources: federal cooperative agreement funds and fee receipts. All of the brownfields fees charged by the program go into the Brownfields Property Reuse Act Implementation Account as authorized under the statute. While the majority of Brownfields Program funding still comes from the federal cooperative agreement, the fee funds are used by the program to supplement the federal cooperative agreement funds and play a key role in the program's capacity to produce brownfields agreements.

Table 3. Brownfields Property Reuse Act Implementation Account Balances

Fiscal Year	Year End Fund Balance
2008	$345,720
2009	$361,300
2010	$216,913
2011	$308,237
2012	$363,472

For the state fiscal reporting year from July 1, 2011, through June 30, 2012, the Brownfields Property Reuse Act Implementation Account had a beginning balance of $308,237, receipts from fees and interest of $357,093 and disbursements of $301,858. This yields an ending fund balance of $363,472. Through the increase in fees mentioned above, especially from the implementation of the Redevelopment Now program option, the fund balance is relatively stable even in the face of declining federal funding. This confirms that the fee increases the Brownfields Program has thus far instituted have been at the proper, balanced level to offset program costs. Continued fund stability in the future requires a consistent level of interest by developers in the Brownfields Program and relatively flat federal funding. Further significant cuts in the Brownfields Program's federal grant or reduced income from fees would jeopardize the program's funding and likely result in having to reduce program capacity. However, through the successful implementation of various fee increases and options, the Brownfields Program has stabilized its resources.
