

Plastic bottles, wooden pallets and oil filters are now banned from all NC Landfills
(and those in-State transfer stations from where waste is destined out of state)

New landfill disposal bans came into effect October 1, 2009 on used oil filters, plastic bottles (except motor oil bottles) and wooden pallets under North Carolina General Statute 130A-309.10(f). All residents and businesses in Orange County are urged to comply with the bans by recycling these items or reusing or reducing use of them where possible and feasible e.g. returning pallets, reducing bottled water purchases. We do note that in Orange County, wooden pallets are already required to be recycled, not landfilled, as part of our ban on landfilling clean wood waste. County residents may readily recycle their empty, flattened plastic bottles at the curb or at drop-off sites throughout the County. Residents may recycle drained-out oil filters (and motor oil) as well as wooden pallets at any of the five staffed Solid Waste Convenience Centers. Wooden pallets are limited to one pickup truck load per day from a County resident. See www.p2pays.org

Plastic bottles, wooden pallets and oil filters are now banned from all NC Landfills
(and those in-State transfer stations from where waste is destined out of state)

New landfill disposal bans came into effect October 1, 2009 on used oil filters, plastic bottles (except motor oil bottles) and wooden pallets under North Carolina General Statute 130A-309.10(f). All residents and businesses in Orange County are urged to comply with the bans by recycling these items or reusing or reducing use of them where possible and feasible e.g. returning pallets, reducing bottled water purchases. We do note that in Orange County, wooden pallets are already required to be recycled, not landfilled, as part of our ban on landfilling clean wood waste. County residents may readily recycle their empty, flattened plastic bottles at the curb or at drop-off sites throughout the County. Residents may recycle drained-out oil filters (and motor oil) as well as wooden pallets at any of the five staffed Solid Waste Convenience Centers. Wooden pallets are limited to one pickup truck load per day from a County resident. See www.p2pays.org

Plastic bottles, wooden pallets and oil filters are now banned from all NC Landfills
(and those in-State transfer stations from where waste is destined out-of-state)

New landfill disposal bans came into effect October 1, 2009 on used oil filters, plastic bottles (except motor oil bottles) and wooden pallets under North Carolina General Statute 130A-309.10(f). All residents and businesses in Orange County are urged to comply with the bans by recycling these items or reusing or reducing use of them where possible and feasible e.g. returning pallets, reducing bottled water purchases. We do note that in Orange County, wooden pallets are already required to be recycled, not landfilled, as part of our ban on landfilling clean wood waste. County residents may readily recycle their empty, flattened plastic bottles at the curb or at drop-off sites throughout the County. Residents may recycle drained-out oil filters (and motor oil) as well as wooden pallets at any of the five staffed Solid Waste Convenience Centers. Wooden pallets are limited to one pickup truck load per day from a County resident. See www.p2pays.org